MEMBERS’ MEETING

Friday 8:30 am - 9:15 am, University Ballroom A - D

After having a continental breakfast on Friday morning, join your fellow members for an update on NCLCA. The Members’ breakfast provides an opportunity for the Executive Board of NCLCA to induct new officers, conduct discussion and voting that must go before the membership, and give annual reports to membership.

This is your chance to gain insight and participate in the decision-making of NCLCA. Your input is very important to the organization.
Welcome to the 25th Annual National College Learning Center Association Conference, Racing to Student Excellence! The entire NCLCA Board and many other volunteers have toiled tirelessly on your behalf to present an exciting conference.

Elaine Richardson, NCLCA Vice President and 2010 Conference Chair, has worked extremely hard over the last year, and the last few months especially, to make this the best NCLCA conference ever! Keynote speaker, Marcus Engel, will enthrall us with an “unforgettable message of overcoming adversity” and his amazing journey in turning life’s obstacles into opportunities. Elaine has scheduled an eclectic array of pre- and post-conference institutes, including the first ever Leadership Institute of the Council for Learning Assistance and Developmental Education Associations presented by Russ Hodges, CLADEA Chair, and Jack Truschel, CLADEA Vice Chair and NCLCA Vice President-Elect. In addition, Travis Ramage and the proposals committee have selected a great set of presentations and poster sessions that are sure to pique your interest.

The local committee led by Martha Sanburg of the University of North Carolina Charlotte has arranged an outstanding assortment of Night/Weekend on the Town ideas including the Feel the Thrill Tour of Charlotte Motor Speedway on Thursday night. Also because we are in Charlotte on the first Friday of the month, we have the opportunity to participate in the NoDa Gallery Crawl in “historic art district” of Charlotte. Or, if you sew, then you MUST go to Mary Jo’s Cloth Store on Saturday. More fabric than you may have ever seen in one place!

Of course, a key reason for the success of NCLCA is the “family feel” to our organization, so be sure to take time to network and commune with your learning center compatriots while you are in Charlotte. None of us have all the answers, but all of us have some of the answers. And we all have lots of questions! Get reacquainted with your colleagues while strolling around the path on the lake next to the hotel or while enjoying the cuisine, brew, and view at Boardwalk Billy’s.

Also, please continue helping us make each conference the best ever by providing your feedback on the session and conference evaluation forms. We review every one of these, and we have implemented many of your ideas and suggestions each year. Thank you!

And don’t forget to make plans for the 26th Annual NCLCA Conference (Learning Centers: At the Crossroads of Student Success) at the Westin in beautiful downtown Indianapolis September 28—October 1, 2011!

Collegially,
Alan Craig
NCLCA President 2009-2010
Who we are

The National College Learning Center Association (NCLCA) is an organization of professionals dedicated to promoting excellence among learning center personnel. NCLCA welcomes any individual interested in assisting college and university students along the road to academic success.

NCLCA defines a learning center as a place where students can be taught to become more efficient and effective learners. Learning Center services may include tutoring, mentoring, supplemental instruction, academic and skill-building labs, computer aided instruction, success seminars/programs, advising and more.

Mission and Goals

The mission of NCLCA is to support learning assistance professionals as they develop and maintain learning centers, programs, and services to enhance student learning at the post-secondary level.

This support will include the following:

- Promoting professional standards in the areas of administration and management, program and curriculum design, evaluation, and research;
- Acting on learning assistance issues at local, regional, and national levels;
- Assisting in the creation of new and enhancement of existing learning centers and programs;
- Providing opportunities for professional development, networking, and idea exchange through conferences, workshops, institutes and publications;
- Coordinating efforts with related professional associations; and
- Offering forums for celebrating and respecting the profession.

Specific needs addressed by NCLCA

NCLCA addresses the concerns of learning centers and learning center administrators, including starting centers and on-going programming and development. While NADE and other organizations do exemplary jobs of examining developmental coursework, tutoring, SI and other academic support program initiatives, no other national organization but NCLCA speaks specifically and routinely to the day-to-day needs of learning centers and their administrators: supervision, training, data management, fiscal management, program evaluation, retention issues, institutional politics, technology, and the issues of mid-managers in higher education.

NCLCA is known as a friendly organization offering especially good practical information, skill development, and advice to the newcomer as well as the experienced practitioner. The organization provides many opportunities for its members to share their knowledge, learn from others, and further the goals of the profession, including:

- Forums for collaboration and mentoring.
- Presenting and participating in the yearly conference.
- Resources on a variety of topics, including the Bibliography.
- Training opportunities such as the NCLCA Institute.
- Serving on the Executive Board.
- Applying for grants, such as the Brenda Pfahler Professional Development Grant.
- Submitting articles to The Learning Assistance Review or the NCLCA Newsletter.

Your participation is welcomed and encouraged.
The Learning Assistance Review (TLAR)

The Learning Assistance Review (TLAR) is the peer reviewed journal for the National College Learning Center Association.

In the past three years, the journal’s mission has been to not only encourage scholarship in the discipline but to provide support for those hoping to enter the world of publication. As a result, the NCLCA members have benefited from a wide diversity of topics, types of articles, and submissions from all over the world, with the farthest published submission from Australia.

In addition, we are proud to expand our scholarship to beyond our association, as TLAR is now electronically available through ERIC and EBSCO. TLAR is now able to participate in the long-arm of scholarly dialogue among all the associated disciplines and disciples.

While progress has been made, scholarly publication is still struggling to attract a consistent supply of submissions. Members are urged to attend the TLAR workshop or speak with the editors about possible submissions. Learning Assistant Professionals are critical to student success; publishing is a way to memorialize not only our best practice, theory, and research but also as a way to bring credence to our profession in an academic environment that values scholarship.

The NCLCA Newsletter is mailed four times a year to the membership. Many different types of feature articles are published, including:

- A Campus Visit: description of a learning center, including successful programs, organizational structure, marketing techniques, training strategies, hiring practices, collaborative efforts, and any aspect of the learning center's operation that would be of interest to our readers.

- Practitioner's Corner: specific techniques and strategies for building different aspects of successful learning center programs.

- From the President's Desk: the current president of NCLCA takes this opportunity to address the membership.

- Tutor Spotlight: tutors and SI leaders from many different institutions are honored by their supervisors.

- Conference Corner: upcoming deadlines for proposal submissions to conferences; dates of upcoming conferences; names and URL’s of professional organizations.

Marcus Engel lived these horrific moments… but that is only the beginning of the story. On a cold autumn night during his first semester of college, a drunk driver struck the car in which Marcus was riding. When he awoke to a world he would never again see, Marcus faced seemingly insurmountable obstacles: survive hundreds of hours of reconstructive surgery, adapt to blindness and find happiness in a world changed forever.

While still restricted to a hospital bed, a feeding tube and respirator, Marcus set his goal: return to college as quickly as possible. This goal would sustain him through two years of medical recovery, a six-month stint at rehab school and one month training with a new Seeing Eye dog.

Not only did Marcus accept and embrace the challenge, but the life lessons he learned are now the guiding forces that inspire hundreds of thousands every day.

Marcus’ career as a professional speaker began at the young age of 22. His story has empowered, enlightened and entertained audiences around the nation to overcome personal adversity and make intelligent decisions. His autobiography, After This… An Inspirational Journey for All the Wrong Reasons was released in 2002 and has helped tens of thousands realize their potential and reach for new goals. His newest book, The Other End of the Stethoscope: 33 Insights for Excellent Patient Care, was released in 2006 and is a tribute to Health Care Professionals.

Marcus Engel inspires audiences to achieve success by making intelligent choices.

His programs help audiences to:

- Understand repercussions of unhealthy decisions
- Break through self-limiting behaviors
- Achieve success despite the obstacles
- Learn how choices, not circumstances, determine happiness
- Turn adversity into victory
- Explore issues associated with disability
- Find inspiration in unlikely places
- Realize the true value of interpersonal relationships
Help! I’m a New Learning Center Director

Biography

Alan Craig is the Coordinator of the Learning & Tutoring Center (LTC) at Georgia Perimeter College—Dunwoody Campus. His responsibilities include many typical components of a learning assistance center including a reading lab, writing center, and math and science center. The LTC also provides tutoring in other disciplines, conducts a variety of workshops, and sponsors ESL conversation groups. Alan also teaches a first-year college orientation/learning skills course and the occasional math or statistics course. He is the chair of the campus academic exclusion appeals committee. Under his leadership, GPC—Dunwoody LTC tied for first place in the 2005 NCLCA/LSCHE Website Excellence Award.

Alan has an AA in Liberal Arts from Hillsborough Community College and a BA (summa cum laude) and MA in Mathematics from the University of South Florida. He is a doctoral student in the developmental education program at Grambling State University. Alan has been an adjunct instructor in mathematics at Georgia Perimeter College and at Hillsborough Community College. He tutored at both as well. In addition to his role as Vice President of NCLCA, Alan is a member of CRLA, NADE, and ATP, and is the Treasurer of the Georgia Tutoring Association. Alan is also Associate Content Editor of the web portal Learning Support Centers in Higher Education. http://www.lsche.net

PRE-CONFERENCE INSTITUTE B

Linda Thompson and Karen Patty Graham
Wednesday, September 29, 9:00am-12:00 pm, Lakeshore Ballroom IV

Evaluating Tutoring or Course-Based Learning Assistance Programs Using the NADE Guides to Self-Evaluation, 2nd Ed.

Biography

Linda Thompson is Director of the McNair Scholars Program and Professor of Psychology at Harding University in Searcy, Arkansas. She holds the Ed.D. degree in Higher Education from the University of Memphis, where her dissertation research focused on the effect of centralized vs. decentralized developmental education program structure on student retention and achievement. She is a past president of the National Association for Developmental Education (NADE) and a Fellow of the Council of Learning Assistance and Developmental Education Associations. She has served on the NADE Certification Council since 2003 and currently chairs the Council.

Thompson co-wrote (with Dr. Karen Patty-Graham) the revised chapter, “Factors Influencing the Teaching/Learning Process Guide,” in the 2009 NADE Self-Evaluation Guides, 2nd Edition: Best Practice in Academic Support Programs. Thompson designed, proposed and implemented a developmental program at Harding University in 1986. In 1987, under a Title III grant, she started a Learning Center and in 1990 she accepted leadership of Harding’s TRIO Student Support Services Program, which she directed until 2003. Since that time, she has directed the Ronald E. McNair Post-baccalaureate Achievement Program at the school. She has also presented workshops nationally on communication skills and multicultural awareness and on uses of the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator in tutor training, counseling and teaching. She also consults and presents on NADE Certification. She has coordinated peer mentoring and peer tutoring programs, taught freshman orientation courses and study skills seminars, advised freshman undeclared majors, and taught Developmental Psychology, “Lifespan Development.” Her husband is the Dean of Sciences and professor of mathematics at Harding University. They have one son and two grandsons who live in Nashville, TN. Thompson is active in her church where she interprets for the deaf.

Biography

Karen Patty-Graham retired in 2007 as Director of Instructional Services at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville where she had taught, advised, and served as a department administrator for thirty years. She holds an Ed.D. in the Instructional Process, with a specialization in Curriculum and Instruction, from Southern Illinois University Edwardsville. Her dissertation focused on retention of academically high risk university students. She served two terms as Vice President of the National Association for Developmental Education (NADE), as President-elect in 2008-2009, and as President in 2009-2010. She is a Fellow of the American Council of Developmental Education Associations (now Council of Learning Assistance and Developmental Education Associations, CLADEA) and a recipient of the Henry Young Award for Outstanding Individual Contribution to NADE. Dr. Patty-Graham has served as NADE’s Director for the Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education and as Review Operations Manager for the Certification Council. She is co-author (with Dr. Linda Thompson) of one of the four program self-evaluation guides in the NADE Self-Evaluation Guides, 2nd Edition. She is a past president of both the Midwest Regional Association for Developmental Education (MRADE) and Chapter 203 of The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi at SIUE. Dr. Patty-Graham’s career includes teaching at the elementary level, including Title I reading; university reading and study skills courses; and teacher preparation courses in developmental and remedial reading as well as in content reading strategies. She has been a frequent workshop presenter at local and national levels. Instructional Services, which she directed since 1987, provides developmental and enrichment courses, math tutoring, testing, the Writing Center, Supplemental Instruction, a summer bridge program, and a freshman seminar for SIUE students. Instructional Services developmental coursework received NADE certification in 2004.

Evaluating Tutoring or Course-Based Learning Assistance Programs, cont.

Summary of Presentation

What is a major difference between successful programs that consistently produce excellent student outcomes and less-effective programs? The literature shows consistently that programs that engage in ongoing, systematic assessment and evaluation demonstrate better student outcomes than those that do not regularly assess or that assess sporadically.

This session will provide participants with a resource for engaging in their own initial self-evaluations and will discuss the assessment loop that provides long-term knowledge of their programs’ effectiveness. This knowledge can provide the basis for making program improvements and demonstrating the effectiveness of their programs over time.

They will be introduced to—and will have an opportunity to practice using—the NADE Self-Evaluation Guides, 2nd ed., Best Practices in Academic Support Programs for Tutoring Programs and Course-based Learning Assistance Programs such as Supplemental Instruction, Structured Learning Assistance, and Peer-Led Team Learning. The session will show how the Guides may be useful to professionals who are developing Learning Centers or student support programs by introducing them to statements of best practice and giving them an opportunity to compare their practices to these statements.

Presenters are authors of the Guides and members of the NADE Certification Council.

PRE-CONFERENCE INSTITUTE C

Elizabeth McWilliams
Wednesday, September 29, 2:00pm-5:00 pm, Lakeshore Ballroom II

Personalizing Academic Assistance: The Art of Building an Academic Coaching Program

Biography

Elizabeth McWilliams is the head Academic Coach in the Academic Success Center at Clemson University where she has been instrumental in developing and expanding the academic coaching program. In addition, she established and serves as the coordinator for Tiger Success, a program which targets students on Academic Probation. Elizabeth is a member of the Academic Recovery Team (ART) at Clemson’s ASC and is the coordinator of the Academic Recovery Program at the University. Prior to joining the Academic Success Center staff in 2008, Elizabeth was active with the Council for Exceptional Children presenting at the state and national levels. She received her BA in Elementary Education and her MEd in Special Education from Clemson University. Elizabeth taught in public schools for 28 years and at Clemson University in the Department of Special Education.

Summary of Presentation

In the same way that an athletic coach identifies an athlete’s strengths and weaknesses – and develops a training regime so the athlete may excel – academic coaches work with students on goal-setting, motivation, time management, personal accountability and other skills. They then partner with the student to set game plans for success. The primary focus of this workshop is to share ideas and information for building an Academic Coaching program; participants can then take it back to their campus and enable more students to benefit from the coaching experience. First, the session will provide attendees with the history of Academic Coaching at Clemson University. Understanding the process of development will help attendees develop a plan to approach academic coaching at their institution. Second, participants will receive an overview of resources used in academic coaching. The session will promote in-depth discussion and exchange of ideas. General topics to be presented and discussed will include:

- Getting started with an academic coaching program
- Promoting your services
- Serving a range of student populations
- Working with probation students
- Findings and Results at Clemson
- What’s Next for You?

Alan Craig is the Coordinator of the Learning & Tutoring Center (LTC) at Georgia Perimeter College—Dunwoody Campus. His responsibilities include many typical components of a learning assistance center including a reading lab, writing center, and math and science center. The LTC also provides tutoring in other disciplines, conducts a variety of workshops, and sponsors ESL conversation groups. Alan also teaches a first-year college orientation/learning skills course and the occasional math or statistics course. He is the chair of the campus academic exclusion appeals committee. Under his leadership, GPC—Dunwoody LTC tied for first place in the 2005 NCLCA/LSCHEN Website Excellence Award. Alan has an AA in Liberal Arts from Hillsborough Community College and a BA (summa cum laude) and MA in Mathematics from the University of South Florida. He is a doctoral student in the developmental education program at Grambling State University. Alan has been an adjunct instructor in mathematics at Georgia Perimeter College and at Hillsborough Community College. He tutored at both as well. In addition to his role as Vice President of NCLCA, Alan is a member of CRLA, NADE, and ATP, and is the Treasurer of the Georgia Tutoring Association. Alan is also Associate Content Editor of the web portal Learning Support Centers in Higher Education.

Summary of Presentation

After an introduction to the concept of best practices, the participants will view over 60 best practices that are suggested that they consider for their center. Practices are grouped in nine presentation modules with time for feedback after each practice and for group sharing after each module. Best practices will focus on basic areas of centers, clientele of centers, its programs and services, technology, the partnering and brokering of services, assessment and evaluation, publicity and public relations, staff training, and certification of its programs, and personnel. Participants will be urged to share this PP presentation on their campus. Presentation will offer a link to an extensive LSCHEN bibliography keyed to individual best practices.
Conferences & Publications

Monograph No. 7
Supplemental Instruction: Improving First-Year Student Success in High-Risk Courses, 3rd edition
Marion E. Stone & Glen Jacobs, Editors
Produced in collaboration with the International Center for St. University of Missouri-Kansas City
Since its inception more than three decades ago, Supplemental Instruction (SI) has been adopted by institutions in nearly 30 countries and adapted to fit a variety of institutional contexts. By targeting high-risk courses rather than at-risk students, SI overcomes the stigma attached to remedial education, making it a suitable intervention for all learners. This new edition addresses the history and theoretical basis for SI, reviews evidence of its success, and includes a more detailed discussion of program implementation and administration. (2008). 120 pages. ISBN 978-1-889-27162-0. $35

Monograph No. 53
Organizing for Student Success: The University College Model
Scott E. Evenbeck, Barbara Jackson, Maggy Smith, Dorothy Ward, & Associates
Produced in association with The Association of Directors of Undergraduate Studies
Organizing for Student Success draws on data from more than 50 institutions to provide insight into how universities organize their initiatives they house, and the practices in place to ensure their effectiveness. The university college has emerged as a structure for organizing not only the first college year but also the entire undergraduate experience to ensure that students succeed and persist to graduation. An invaluable resource for first-year experience steering committees, general education reform committees, and other groups or administrators charged with reorganizing and revitalizing the delivery of undergraduate education. Ultimately, these structures are also catalysts for creating institutional change. (2010). 180 pages. ISBN 978-1-889-27170-5. $40

Monograph No. 38
Transforming the First Year of College for Students of Color
Laura Rendon, Mildred Garcia, & Dawn Person, Editors
Chapters address specific strategies for working with African American, Latino/a, Asian Pacific American, American Indian/Alaska Native, and multiracial student populations to ensure their success in the first year of college and beyond. Strategies for creating inclusive classroom environments, opportunities for intergroup and intragroup interactions, and enhancing academic and social integration are also addressed. (2004). 208 pages. ISBN 1-889271-45-4. $35

A Faculty and Staff Guide to Creating Learning Outcomes
Jimmie Gahagan, John Dingfelder, and Katharine Pei
Produced in association with the Office of Student Engagement, University of South Carolina
For more than a decade, educators have focused on illustrating the effectiveness of educational interventions by measuring changes in grade point averages, retention, satisfaction, and participation. What such measures don’t tell us is what students know or are able to do as a result of their educational experiences. A Faculty and Staff Guide to Creating Learning Outcomes presents a framework for developing and assessing student learning outcomes in a brief, accessible format. (2016). 32 pages. _Racing Into the Future of Learner Support and Center Management_

Biography

Lisa D’Adamo Weinstein is currently the Director of Academic Support at Empire State College’s Northeast Center. Lisa has also taught and coordinated academic assistance and learning support programs at Indiana University’s Student Academic Center, including an academic retention course for at-risk students. She was Coordinator of Student-Athlete Academic Support at American University in Washington, D.C. Most recently she directed the Academic Excellence Program at the United States Military Academy, West Point for seven years until moving in August 2006 to the NY State Capital Region. Lisa has published journal articles for The Learning Assistance Review (published by NCLCA) and is co-author of the book Piecing It Together: A Guide to Academic Success.

Biography

Craig Lamb is the Director of Academic Support at Empire State College’s Center for Distance Learning. While Craig is working primarily with students in need of additional academic support services and academic skills development, and with faculty interested in delivering their course content and material in more effective ways to increase student learning, he is becoming more and more interested in the creative uses of technology to enhance student learning both within and outside the online classroom environment.

Biography

Tacy Holliday used to be a student who was at a college learning center so much that she was often teased about living there. Now she manages that center. Trained in organizational psychology, Tacy is interested in helping individuals, groups, and organizations realize their potentials. She views the appropriate use of technology as an avenue to do this effectively and efficiently. As the Director of the Science Learning Center at the Germantown Campus of Montgomery College, Tacy officially serves as manager, tutor trainer, and science tutor. Unofficially, she serves as a student and staff cheerleader, and as an advocate for student-centered learning assistance and customer service. Tacy is a joyful participant in the National College Learning Center Association in various roles and has obtained Level 3 Certification in Learning Center Leadership, offered by NCLCA. Her articles have been published in The Journal of Leadership Studies and TLAR. She also authored At Least 50 Great Ideas for Tutor Training.

Summary of Presentation

Students today are wired, wireless, online and on facebook -- learning centers need to meet students in real and virtual spaces -- this institute is designed to help learning center professionals leverage emerging technologies to manage and train staff, create learning resources, deliver tutoring and other services, and evaluate programs. Participants will be introduced to emerging technologies and suggestions for how to use them to assist learning and center management.

Wendy Wilson
Saturday, October 2, 9:00 am-12:00 pm, Lakeshore Ballroom IV

Setting Your GPS for Success:
Developing a Strategic Plan for Your Learning Center

Biography
Dr. Wendy Wilson is the Assistant Director of Academic Support for the University of North Texas Dallas. She was recruited just this year to help develop the academic support programs for the new university. In the past, she has directed a comprehensive learning assistance unit at the University of Maryland and Directed the Tutorial Programs for the United States Naval Academy. She has experience directing both a professional and student staff of over 150 students.

Wendy holds a PhD in College Student Personnel Administration from the University of Maryland, a Master’s in Education with a Reading Specialist endorsement and a Bachelor’s in English from Harding University in Searcy, AR. Wendy’s background has provided her with a variety of experiences in higher education. Beginning with an interest in the teaching and learning process, she was an undergraduate tutor in her university’s learning center. Since that time, she has served in roles where she has taught high school students, facilitated the matriculation of pre-college students, coordinated academic programs and directed both co-curricular and student development programs. In these roles, she has been interested in creating environments that allow students to engage with the institution and provide them with opportunities to be validated as learners.

Wendy served as President of NCLCA from 2005-6, the co-chair of the NCLCA Institute and an Institute mentor. Wendy was also a founding member of the Association for the Tutoring Profession and has served as a professional consultant for the American Council on Education.

Summary of Presentation

- Do you want to be able to communicate your goals and objectives to administrators and others on campus?
- Are you being called upon to identify the most effective use of the institution’s resources and your center’s key priorities?
- Is everyone in your office going in different directions and you need to develop a common vision to move the center forward?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, you have a need for strategic planning. This process allows center Directors and leaders to align their goals and objectives to the institution’s priorities and the best practices in learning assistance. With budget shortfalls and increasing accountability, participants in this interactive workshop will gain the necessary tools to help them demonstrate the center’s centrality to the campus community. Attendees will learn about a 10-step strategic planning process and will focus specifically on identifying the key issues facing the center in the next 1-3 years and how to develop a plan to address those needs. Examples will be provided from a successful strategic planning process.

CONCURRENT SESSION DETAILS

Concurrent Sessions 1  Thursday, September 30  10:05 am—11:05 am

Salon I  NCLCA Learning Center Leadership Certification
Rae Maslana, Coordinator-Tutoring Services, College of DuPage (LCLC Chair 2007-10)

Often learning assistance professionals come into the field through happenstance rather than intentional design. Learning Center Leadership Certification allows novice or highly-experienced individuals, from part-time faculty or staff to learning center directors, to acquire the credential, Certified Learning Center Professional.

NCLCA is the sole provider of certification in learning center leadership. This certification acknowledges accomplishments through benchmarking, sharing experiences and training in theories and best practices in learning assistance. Furthermore, a Certified Learning Center Professional possesses a nationally-recognized credential and set of standards by which to foster future growth and development by focusing on evolving levels of practice, training, self-reflection, service, and evaluation.

This session will outline the 4 levels of certification, provide detailed criteria for each level, and review the application submission process and highlight submission strategies to possibly avoid applicant re-work.

Salon II  A Modified Version of SLA: How We Made it Work for Franklin University Math Students.
Holly Englert, Learning Resources Coordinator, Franklin University

Recognizing the need to improve student success in gateway math courses, Franklin University modified Ferris State’s SLA program to enhance existing academic support services for students. In this presentation, we will discuss the steps taken to implement our version of SLA, best practices, and student performance data.

Salon III  The Undergraduate Learning Commons: Exploring the Centralization of Academic Support
Eric Moschella, Director of Academic Support, Georgia Institute of Technology

Recently the Georgia Institute of Technology broke ground on the Wayne G. Clough Undergraduate Learning Commons, a “one stop shop” for all undergraduate academic support services. This presentation will outline the physical centralization of academic support on a campus whose academic support network is vastly decentralized.

Salon IV  From Zero to Sixty in One Semester Flat: The Trials, Tribulations, and Rewards of Creating a Successful Learning Center
Maria Zullo, Director, Learning Assessment & Support Center, Valley Forge Military College

Creating a learning center is an exciting and challenging experience. Given unlimited time and resources, plans for an effective and successful center can be designed and executed with a minimum of stress. However, most directors do not live on Fantasy Island and have to contend with limited time and even more limited resources. This presentation offers commonsense strategies and suggestions for building and operating a successful learning center.

Walden  Are You in the Groove, or Do You Crash on the Track with Your PowerPoint?
Sylvia Ramsey-Rezner, Academic Resource Coordinator - Assoc. Professor, Georgia Military College - Augusta Campus

If your PowerPoint is the centerpiece of your presentation instead of it being “you,” then you are sure to crash on the track with your audience. If abused, it can turn your audience off. Learn how can you get in the groove on the track and see that checkered flag at the finish line!

Salon IV

Why Reinvent the Wheel, When You Can Take Control of It? Student Excellence through Professional Development

Kathy McFatter, Marketing/Member Services, STARLINK

The race is on! This fun interactive session will provide you with the professional development resources and tips to maneuver your Teaching and Learning Center into the Winners Circle of student excellence. Sit back, relax, and take a load off and let STARLINK do the driving! Vrooom!

Walden

Open Session

Burnham

Collaborations to Get General Engineering Students on the Right Track

Christine Murphy, Lecturer / Special Programs Coordinator, Clemson University

Elizabeth Stephan, Director General Engineering, Clemson University

The Academic Success Center offers workshops, supplemental instruction, tutoring, a university skills course, academic coaching and counseling to academically engage students. Presenter will share details and results of the collaborative effort with the general engineering program at Clemson to increase academic performance by increasing student participation in academic support services.

Olmstead

Reach your potential! Climb that “scholarship mountain!” Publish in *The Learning Assistance Review (TLAR)!

Christine Reichert, Coordinator-Tutoring & Disability Services and Jeannine Rajan, Director of Academic Enrichment Center, University of Toledo- Health Sciences Campus

The presentation will have two parts. The first part will be the nuts & bolts of preparing manuscripts for submission. The second part will be a workshop to brainstorm article ideas and present tips for finding time to write in a busy work day. Special focus will be on how to design a project that can build on existing TLAR articles (part of the “Join the Conversation” segment).

Glenwaters

Transformational Learning: A New Model of Peer Education

Jenny Pippen, Assistant Director, Academic Support Services, North Central College

With the changing needs of Millennials, we need to adapt current tutoring practices to reflect those specific needs. I believe this generation of students has been coddled by parents, coaches and teachers. Therefore they lack important life skills that are needed to be successful academically and personally in a college setting. Currently, tutoring and mentoring are separate entities at the College. These models are incomplete in and of themselves. Tutoring assists with the academic development of students but is very isolated in its approach and scope. Students and tutors only focus on the course materials of the moment and do not focus on the future development of the student whether in course work or outside academics. Mentoring focuses on the relationship and how to develop as a person but lacks the academic focus. By bringing both together, the student can receive a more holistic approach to academic and personal development.

Concurrent Sessions 3

Thursday, September 30

2:00 pm—3:15 pm

Salon I

Empowering Students for Writing Across the Curriculum: The Tutor Training/Critical Thinking Connection

Esther Owens, Coordinator of SEEK Academic Support Center, John Jay College

Tutor training that integrates critical thinking skills in the tutoring of writing is essential in helping students to become better and more thoughtful writers. This kind of tutoring helps tutees to race to excellence in their academic lives. Conference workshop participants will engage in interactive exercises that demonstrate how tutors can incorporate skills of critical thinking into writing across the curriculum as well as become acquainted with a theoretical framework on which this is based.
Salon II  Online Tutoring: The Lock Haven University Experience After One-Year
Pamela Czapla, Director, Tutorial Services, Lock Haven University.
Students text and use Facebook but do they want online tutoring? Lock Haven University’s first year experience with the mechanics of purchasing, installing and marketing Smarthinking to faculty and students will be described via PowerPoint. The floor will then be opened up to enable the audience to exchange experiences and thoughts.

Salon III  Embedding Learning Strategies in Tutorial and Small Group Sessions Summary
Jim Valkenburg, Director, TLC, Delta College
Embedding Learning Strategies in Tutorial and Small Group Sessions is a workshop that offers a synthesis of ideas about how to help students learn by inserting learning strategies into tutorial or small group sessions. Participants will be asked to actively engage in a series of scenarios that will exemplify how tutors and facilitators can employ learning strategies to improve student learning.

Salon IV  “I’m Late, I’m Late for A Very Important Date …” Stories from the Development of a Student Success Center
Jim Wilson, Ed.D., Assistant Vice President, Academic Affairs, Wilmington University
Peggy Mitchell, Director, Student Success Center, Wilmington University
This presentation will tell the story surrounding the planning, implementation, development and assessment of a new university student success center.

Walden  Keeping up with the Millennials: To What Extent Should Technology Change the Nature of Our Work With and For Students?
Christine Blaney, Learning Instructor, University of Pennsylvania
Marlena Reese, Learning Instructor, University of Pennsylvania
Facebook; iCal; Google Suite; Blackberries; iPhones; Blackboard. How do we meet students where they are while sustaining the personal nature of our work? In this workshop-style presentation, we will consider provocative questions about the purpose and use of technology as a means for connecting with students.

Burnham  Program Growth: Increasing Your Speed Even on Low Octane Fuel
Tammy Pratt, Director, Assessment and Learning Center, University of Oklahoma
As a fairly new program on our campus, we have both enjoyed generous start-up funding as well as searched for ways to maximize our effective reach to students using freebies. We’ll discuss the low- or no-cost ways we’ve used technology, marketing, increased staffing, and increased space to improve student assistance.

Olmstead  Leaping Ahead From Learning Styles to Learning Systems
Patricia Maher, Director, University of South Florida
Faith Pawelski, Senior Student Services Coordinator, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire
Confused by the numerous learning style models recommended in learning support literature? In this workshop you will have the opportunity to leap ahead into a comprehensive learning system and hear how it has been applied in tutor training and learning strategies courses at two different universities.

Glenwaters  Optimizing & Automating Your Center Services & Data
Mary Oberhelman, US Consultant, Engineerica Systems, Inc.
Pen and paper sign in systems are inaccurate and time consuming. Using an automated system gives you more accurate reports by collecting data and keeping it current. Automated systems that can be customized for your individual needs will optimize services and automate manual processes like appointments scheduling and loaned material checkouts. In this session we will address the above questions/comments & open the floor for a discussion of the advantages of using a computerized tracking system. We will also take you through a tour of the AccuTrack software, the most popular administrative software for tutoring centers in the US.
Maximizing Tutor Training: Teaching Metacognitive Skills
Cora Dzubak, Director, The Nittany Success Center, Penn State - York

You have enough tutors and they are certainly a bright group. But do they really understand what it is to “think”? Are they able to explain to a tutee what is needed, study wise, in order for information to get into long term memory? What role do learning styles play as the tutee and tutor work together? This presentation will include the handouts and activities on metacognition and memory that are used in our CRLA certified tutor training program.

Modeling Best Practices using Best Sellers
Susan Smith-Roads, Learning Center Director, Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology

To model best practices, encourage life-long learning, and emphasize the value of professional development, our Learning Center provides monthly in-service workshops for tutors throughout the academic year. For the past two years, we have used excerpts from popular books – The Fred Factor, Quiet Strength, The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People, and more - to spark discussion with tutors about their work and lives.

High Octane Learning Centers: Fueling Academic Success
Jenny Bruce, Director of Instruction/Associate Professor of Education, Randolph-Macon College

How can learning center professionals improve student academic outcomes and become campus leaders in improving retention rates? We will share methods and materials from our transformation from a learning center into a Center for Teaching and Learning Center that boosts student success to higher levels. The key is in cultivating working relationships with other Campus professionals.

Using What’s Already There: Descriptive Review as Professional Development
Marlena Reese, Learning Instructor, University Of Pennsylvania
Christine Blaney, Learning Instructor, University Of Pennsylvania

“Something significant happens when people commit to a sustained conversation around a shared topic of inquiry” (Himley, M, 2000, p. 199). This workshop-style presentation utilizes the descriptive review process as a way to reconsider professional development, allowing learning professionals to use their insider knowledge to collectively generate new knowledge.

Kiss Kiss: A Call For Learning Centers to Champion Faculty-Student Interaction Out Of Class
M.E. McWilliams, Director of Academic Assistance and Resource Center, Stephen F. Austin State Univ.

Faculty may be resentful if visits to the learning center increase and visits to their offices decrease. Our staff wanted to encourage and recognize faculty-student interaction. Only one way existed to accomplish our mission: unabashedly kissing-up to faculty to implore their input and support for new programs to generate faculty-student interaction.

Circle of Trust: Creating and Maintaining a Sense of Community in Study Groups
Joe Salvatore, Assistant Director, Science Learning Center, University of Michigan

At the start of the semester, 13 students meet together for the first time in their study group. They are strangers. One student, the study group leader, must find a way to connect these students and build their trust in each other. This session will focus on successful strategies and techniques for fostering community, including active participation in icebreakers, games and activities, and collaborative learning techniques.

Dr. Elizabeth Uptegrove, Professor of Math, Felician College

Felician College is an independent co-educational Catholic/Franciscan College founded and sponsored by the Felician Sisters. This poster session will show the success we have had with our recently renovated Math Lab. You will see our students and tutors at work in addition to our passing and retention rates for past semesters.

PALS (Peers Assisting Learning Success): A Proposed Model for Peer Study Skills Coaching
Melinda Coleman, Coordinator of Study Skills Program, College of Charleston
Steve Gibson, Director, Center for Student Learning, College of Charleston

Who can juggle 5 classes, 2 jobs, 3 leadership positions, and still have time to play on the weekend? An exceptional student, of course! Can we turn their abilities into resources for students who need study skills assistance? Join us for discussion as we share ideas for our pilot program.

From Notebook and Pen: How to Create a Tutoring Program From Scratch
Jennifer Fasy, Program Coordinator, Salt Lake Community College

In 2006, our college wanted to create a campus one-to-one tutoring program. We didn’t have an office, computer, phone, or even a name. This presentation covers how we grew from nothing but pen and paper to a full-blown program, and provides ideas, Dos/Don’ts, and examples for other new programs.

If You Build It, They Will Come: Growing a Learning Assistance Center Creatively and Cost-Effectively
Juan J. Moreno, Director, Learning Assistance Center, Texas A&M University-Kingsville

In 2004, Texas A&M University-Kingsville established a Learning Assistance Center for students. Unfortunately, its impacts were disappointing. In 2009, plans were developed to renovate the Center and develop a comprehensive and inviting learning space. Investments of state and federal funding and sweat equity resulted in improved program effectiveness.

Creating an Interactive CRLA Tutor Training
Marisol Jimenez, Associate Director, Lehman College
Dr. Ainsley Parkinson, LCSLC Coordinator, Lehman College
Sarah Blazer, Writing and Literacy Coordinator, Lehman College

In 2009, the Instructional Support Services Program (ISSP) at Lehman College redesigned its tutor training following the guidelines of the College Reading and Learning Association (CRLA). We will provide an overview of how the program changed its CRLA training and created over 25 interactive workshops to train writing and content tutors.

Reeling Them In: Marketing a Tutoring Center
Mary Hamilton, LTC Coordinator, Georgia Perimeter College
Charlie Lyon, LTC English Supervisor, Georgia Perimeter College

The biggest single problem faced by any business is how to get customers. Even with the best product or service, a business has to attract people willing to pay for it. Tutoring centers face the same challenge: how to attract students who need help (including those who may not know it), how to convince faculty that tutors can offer valuable outside-of-class help, and how to persuade administrators to support the tutoring center’s efforts. With more than 22 years collective experience in tutoring and lab management, the presenters will show examples of successful marketing techniques derived from practical experience, statistical information, and outreach. The poster presented is designed to show that it is not enough to establish a tutoring center, staff it with competent tutors and provide personal and written help to students.
The Benefits of an Academic Counseling Program in a Learning Center
Lori McGregor, Academic Counselor, Clemson University

Explore the benefits of providing academic counseling in your Learning Center! An individual session provides students with a safe environment to discuss reasons they aren’t reaching their academic goals, and also helps them personalize and apply success strategies. Presented: anatomy of a session, assessment instruments, evaluation data, and generating student participation.

Destination Success: Racing to the TVCC Student Success Center
Iris Reeves, Student Success Center Coordinator, Trinity Valley Community College

As funding continues to be elusive and resources scarce, how do we continue to strive to assist our students in their quest for a successful college experience? The idea of a supplemental instruction lab open to all students without qualification considerations became an important goal for the Learning Initiative Council. We hope to share our success and the path we took to achieve that success with those attending the poster presentation at the NCLCA Conference.

Getting Probation Students Back on Track
Christine C. Murphy, PhD, Special Programs Coordinator, Clemson University
Beth McWilliams, Academic Coach, Clemson University

The Academic Success Center offers workshops, supplemental instruction, tutoring, academic coaching and counseling to all students, plus a university skills course and the Tiger Success program to students on probation. This session will detail results of efforts taken to get students from probation back to good standing.
Often learning assistance professionals come into the field through happenstance rather than intentional design. Learning Center Leadership Certification allows novice or highly-experienced individuals, from part-time faculty or staff to learning center directors, to acquire the credential, Certified Learning Center Professional. NCLCA is the sole provider of certification in learning center leadership. This certification acknowledges accomplishments through benchmarking, sharing experiences and training in theories and best practices in learning assistance. Furthermore, a Certified Learning Center Professional possesses a nationally-recognized credential and set of standards by which to foster future growth and development by focusing on evolving levels of practice, training, self-reflection, service, and evaluation. This session will outline the 4 levels of certification, provide detailed criteria for each level, and review the application submission process and highlight submission strategies to possibly avoid applicant re-work.

The transition from undergraduate to graduate school is often problematic for students. However, the problems can be alleviated by providing effective learning strategies that address situations specific to this level of learner. Attendees will learn metacognitive tools and mentoring strategies that help graduate and professional students excel.

Students who utilize Learning Centers on college campuses are faced with the initial need for self disclosure. They need to find a way to ask for the help they need and then reveal their areas of greatest weaknesses to a stranger. Often these students are diagnosed with Learning Disabilities and they bring with them a range of past experiences that shape the way they interact within their academic environment. How can we make these initial interactions positive and at the same time establish a level of trust that will increase the opportunity for further visits to the center? Effective tools and interactive styles will be introduced to help identify obstacles that may inhibit the student’s full engagement in the Learning Center.

Decreases in funding have prompted many learning center professionals to seek affordable resources to support the programs and services in their centers. Changes in student characteristics and demands for learning centers, as well as increased national interest in student success are also fueling the need to be more imaginative and innovative in learning center practice. This session will demonstrate how one learning center is using various technologies (almost all are free) to enhance the efficiency and quality of their programs and services.

Early Alert Systems: Infusing a Proactive Approach to Student Academic Success into the Campus Culture
Keri Fadden, Associate Director of the Allegheny College Learning Commons, Allegheny College
Lynn Zlotkowski, Assistant Director of the Allegheny College Learning Commons, Allegheny College

A student is in academic trouble. How do academic support staff, faculty, and other campus resources collaborate to help that student? Allegheny College uses a self-designed online early alert system where faculty notify the Learning Commons (Academic Support Center) and academic advisor issues a student might be having in their course. These problems can range from one failed test to a student who hasn’t been in class for weeks. The system has proved beneficial because of wide campus support for the system and ability to reach students early on.

Developing a Tutor Training and Resource Wiki Space (2009 Brenda Pfaehler Grant Winner)
Joshua Reid, Coordinator of Learning Services, Illinois State University

Harness the power of Web 2.0 to enhance your tutors’ training and development in a cost- and time-efficient way. Learn how to create your own tutor training and resource wiki space, demonstrating how a wiki can promote tutor collaboration, mentoring, training, professional development, and community. For novice to expert wikiphiliacs!
Salon I
First Lap to Excellence: Using Professional Practices in Tutor Employment
Debra Fetner, Associate Director, Center for Student Learning, College of Charleston
Are you staffing your learning center with the best tutors available to help students excel? Are you designing your hiring process in a way that introduces the professionalism you expect of your employees? Do you know your applicants to ensure they are the right fit? The presenter will discuss the timeline, steps, and materials she uses to acquire a talented staff.

Salon II
Addressing the Needs of Students with Disabilities
Jacqueline Harris, Study Strategies and Writing Coordinator, Ball State University
Larry Markle, Director, Disabled Student Development, Ball State University
The transition from high school to college can be difficult for any student, but for the student with a disability, the transition can be especially challenging. This session will explain how an institution has proactively addressed these issues and offer practical strategies for training tutors in the learning center environment.

Salon III
How to Serve Graduate/Professional Students in a Learning Center: An Example from the University of Houston
Laura Heidel, Learning Strategies Counselor, University of Houston
Trying to provide services to the graduate and professional students on your campus, but don’t know where to start? It is important to offer programs that are relevant to this population, and that are well-marketed. This workshop will give participants several ideas for providing services to this group of students, useful immediately on their own campuses.

Salon IV
Training for the Marathon: An Academic Success Course for Students in College Preparatory Courses
Sara Hamon, Assistant Dean of Undergraduate Studies, Florida State University
Lisa Liseno, Assistant-In Undergraduate Studies, Florida State University
A successful college career is not a series of disjointed academic sprints, but rather a marathon of ongoing and cumulative learning experiences. The conditioning for this grueling race requires mastery of study and life skills. The presenters will highlight their academic success class “linked” to preparatory courses for first-time-in-college students.

Podcasting for Fun and (Educational) Profit
Sara Anderson, Director of Academic Success, Edgewood College
Mary Knasinski, Senior Student Services Coordinator, UW Milwaukee
Your students use electronic media for everything from downloading music to watching movies – why not give them the same methods to explore the services your center offers? Podcasting is one new way to reach students who are constantly on the go. Surprisingly, podcasts are easy to create and distribute and are inexpensive to produce. Learn about two institutions’ very different approaches to podcasting, and the pros and cons of each.

Enhancing Academic Resilience and Retention
Jack Truschel, Professor, East Stroudsburg University
Germain Francois, Professor, East Stroudsburg University
This presentation explores a model of academic resilience. Dealing with stressful circumstances in an effective manner is an area of interest to many. Past research has shown certain characteristics of a personality promote more effective ways of managing stressful circumstances. This presentation draws together theory and action. It will provide attendees with a model that can be used by learning center personnel which can hold a direct implication in the retention of students and the strategies for enhancing academic resilience will be discussed.

The initial challenge was to conceptualize, develop, and implement an undergraduate student development leadership team model in an already existing peer tutoring program. To complicate matters further, the program budget had not increased in almost 20 years and was solely responsible for covering student salaries alone and nothing else. Using the model designed and implemented at Auburn University, presenters will share their experience from conception thru implementation describing the successful development of the first ever Study Partners (Peer Tutoring Program) Management Team. We have chronicled our experience in hopes of inspiring existing peer tutoring programs to design and implement their own student leadership team, or enhance one that is already in place.

| Glenwaters | Using Learning Styles to Put Students on the Fast Track to Success | Laura Sanders (NCLCA Publications Officer), Hesse Learning Resource and Assessment Center Director, Valparaiso University | Valparaiso University |

How do you use a student’s learning style to help them reach their full potential? This session will outline a technique to use a student’s learning style and intellectual ability to help them develop strategies to compensate for their weaknesses and capitalize on their strengths to reach academic success.

Tutoring: Helping Wishes Come True

March 27-30, 2011
Orlando, Florida

The Association for the Tutoring Profession  http://www.myatp.org
Math Connections: Mentors + Mentees = Math Progression
Ross Barnhart, Director of Learning Center, Pueblo Community College

To improve Basic Skills success rates for students. Often life issues or academic issues impair a student’s success in completing their education. Mentoring helps solve these problems as they arise. Forming relationships with campus advocates helps students feel special and fuels their desire to succeed and graduate.

Think about Reading: Talking to Faculty about how to Talk about Reading
Kyle Torke, Coket Fellow in Reading in Rhetoric / Associate Professor, The Colorado College / US Air Force Academy

The improvement of (impoverished) student writing garners most of the teacher’s critical attention in many college courses, but the source for many writing assignments is a text—a book, film, academic article. If the reading of the text proceeds poorly, the writing will also be poor. Often, faculty assign a text without guiding the students about “how to read” the particular item, assuming that everyone who matriculates must know how to read. At the college level, however, reading is complicated: texts are longer, more abstract, filled with technical language, cluttered with unusual layouts, written in different eras, assigned out of context, or problematic for other reasons. If instructors talk with their students about the text they assign and guide students in “how to read” individual texts, students will approach their readings with more dedication, enjoy them with more efficiency, and arrive at class better prepared to articulate their engagement with the text.

Optimizing & Automating Your Center Data with a Web Based System
Mary Oberhelman, US Consultant, Engineerica Systems, Inc

Pen and paper sign in systems are inaccurate and time consuming. Using an automated system gives you more accurate reports by collecting data and keeping it current. Automated systems that can be customized for your individual needs will optimize services and automate manual processes like appointments scheduling and loaned material checkouts. In this session we will address the above questions/comments & open the floor for a discussion of the advantages of using a computerized tracking system. We will also take you through a Power-Point tour of the Accudemia software, the most popular administrative software for tutoring centers in the US.

Rebound to Good Academic Standing!
Martha Sanburg, Assoc. Director, University Center for Academic Excellence, Univ. of North Carolina Charlotte
Liz Fitzgerald, Director of First Year Programs and Student Success, University of North Carolina Charlotte
Carolyn Blattner, Assoc. Director, Student Success, University of North Carolina Charlotte
Marquis McGee, Assist. Director, University Center for Academic Excellence Univ. of North Carolina Charlotte

In 2008 a group of academic and student services professionals at UNC Charlotte came together to dig deeper into understanding what leads our students into academic jeopardy. Through data analysis and a survey of students on academic probation, we observed particularly high probation rates among first semester college students. The students understood they were in trouble and knew they should take advantage of academic support units but few followed through in seeking assistance.

Focusing on the One: Providing the Right Resources to Help Each Student Succeed
Martin Golson, Instructional Specialist, Austin Peay State University
Barbara Hanson, Coordinator, Austin Peay State University

Faced with increased enrollment and decreased funding, how can universities intervene with the right resources, at the right time to support at-risk students? We will show how Austin Peay State University uses data sharing, coordination, and multiple forms of support to identify, assist, and monitor students needing help.
Burnham
Expanding your Learning Center to Meet the Needs of a Changing Student Population
Marcia Laskey, Director of Academic Support, Cardinal Stritch University
Kate Meudt, Assistant Director of Academic Support, Cardinal Stritch University

The college student population is continuously changing; therefore, knowing the needs of today’s college students will help College Learning Centers plan strategies and programs to expand services to better assist students. College learning centers need to look beyond traditional programming. This presentation will focus on the many programs that can be incorporated into Learning Centers. The strategies and programs are designed to assist students in diverse ways rather than just focusing on one-on-one or group tutoring.

Olmstead
Gearing Up to Win the Race
Erica Jackson, Academic Advisor and Diana Johnson, Academic Services Coordinator, Clayton State University

Is your Learning Center seeking an approach that will promote retention, academic success and accountability for those students admitted through developmental or other special programs? As Learning Centers strive to provide programs and assistance for academic success among this population of students, aligning a program that will encourage students to actively embrace university policies, resources, and a disciplined approach to succeed academically is essential. This session will focus on creating a systematic academic success contract designed to capture students as they first enter and gear them up to having a successful transition.

Glenwaters
Marketing to the Finish Line of Success
Mark Daddona (NCLCA Recording Secretary), Director, Center for Academic Success, Clayton State University

Is your Learning center reaching the number of students you think it should? What is the capacity of your center? Before you can help students race to the finish line, they must first know about your available services. This session will focus on effective strategies for marketing learning centers beginning with setting student contact goals, developing low budget marketing strategies, and assessing effectiveness. Participants will also share their marketing ideas and will begin to develop a marketing action plan.

CONTINUING THE CONVERSATION LUNCHEON

Friday, October 1, 1:15 pm - 2:30 pm, Lakeview Room

Free with conference registration. Back by popular demand, NCLCA will again offer a chance for learning center professionals to network over lunch. Meet with a CC leader over a delicious lunch to talk about important learning center issues.

Topics Include:

2-Year Institutions, 4-Year Institutions, Private Institutions, Program Evaluation, Online Academic Support, New Learning Center Directors, Research Interests, Diversity, Grant Writing and Resource Development, Human Resource Management
Salon I  Assessment and Planning: Looking Within to Look Ahead
David Clickner, Director, Learning Centers, Hudson Valley Community College

How can we think about next semester when we get caught up in the day to day activities of providing academic support to students? I will share the methods I employ to help work toward continuous improvement and planning while working to improve service to students as they pursue their academic goals.

Salon II  Embedding the Tutoring Process: Five Models of Using Embedded Tutors in Gatekeeper Courses
Randi Korn, Director Academic Support, MassBay Community College
Barbara Hatch, Asst. Dir. Academic Achievement Center, MassBay Community College

A survey indicated that our male students use tutoring when their friends do while women come to the tutoring center at the bequest of a faculty member. How do we get more students accessing tutoring services? Embed the tutors in a class. This presentation describes five models of embedded tutoring.

Salon III  Student Centered Program Evaluation: Listening to Voices
Adam Pang, Tutoring Program Coordinator, University of Hawaii

As a learning center administrator, you know your center does great work. But, the question is how do you uncover and highlight you and your staff’s dedication, devotion and effectiveness through program evaluation? This presentation will share easy and practical ways to incorporate quantitative and qualitative evaluation into your program.

Salon IV  Recruiting a Campus Pit Crew for Your Center
Jennifer Haley, Core Curriculum Tutoring Coordinator, Ball State University
Jacqueline Harris, Study Strategies and Writing Coordinator, Ball State University
Gary Ritz, Math Tutoring Coordinator, Ball State University

Do you feel that your Learning Center is a bit too insular? Have you been searching for ways to collaborate with other departments and programs on campus but you’re not sure how to make those connections work? Join us to hear about campus connections that have helped us to strengthen our program, market our services, develop creative funding, and maintain the Learning Center as an integral part of campus.

Walden  Sight Unseen: Working with Writing Center Clients through Asynchronous E-Mail Consultations
Michael Frizell, Director, Bear CLAW, Missouri State University

Have you researched ways your Writing Center can serve students enrolled at satellite locations, in online classes, or dual credit courses only to find that your budget can’t accommodate the service? This presentation demonstrates the pedagogically sound and economic e-consultation, while providing samples, marketing tools, and training materials.

Burnham  Worth the Effort: A Positive Experience with Administrative Program Review
Chesney Reich, Director, Catamount Academic Tutoring Center, Western Carolina University
Sara Weertz, Director, Supplemental Instruction, Angelo State University
Nory Prochaska, Director, Mathematics Tutoring Center, Western Carolina University

If the words “program evaluation” conjure images of countless hours spent writing reports that never will be utilized, let alone read, this presentation about WCU’s efforts to institute a formal program review will renew your faith in the inherent good that can come from the systematic examination of academic support units.

SALON I

How to Determine If a Student Knows the Definition of the Terms Required to Benefit from Tutoring
Gary Probst, Professor Emeritus, Prince George's Community College

Attendees will be shown how to create an informal vocabulary inventory to determine if a student knows the definition of the terms required to benefit from tutoring. Strategies will be given that a tutor can use to demonstrate how to learn and use a term’s definition to apply a rule.

SALON II

A+ Innovative Tutoring Method yields 1.4 Million Dollars for Miami Dade College, FL, to Enhance Student Success and Retention for Underprepared Students
John Vassiliou, Director, Computer Courtyard, Learning Resources, Miami Dade College

High school graduates in need of remedial instruction are an important target population for higher education. Institutions are in need to increase students’ performance on their own state-mandated standardized assessments in an efficient and cost-effective manner. While multiple methodologies exist, one increasingly popular method is the use of computer-aided instruction with the assistance of tutoring services.

SALON III

Integrated Learning Support: Greater Than the Sum of Its Parts
Sally Search, Dean for Academic Support Programs, Tallahassee Community College
Sandy Sampson, Learning Commons Coordinator/Communications, Tallahassee Community College
Vera Mayes, Learning Commons Coordinator/Math & Science, Tallahassee Community College

If you build it, they will come! At Tallahassee Community College, faculty, staff, and administrators integrate academic, technology, and counseling support services to increase access to resources and improve retention and success. This session will discuss the service model, resources, strategies for student success, assessment, and how results are used to improve student learning.

SALON IV

Integrating Developmental Reading, Writing and Math Through Collaborative Skills Projects
Roger Perry-Stovall, Math Coordinator, Berkeley College
James Pacello, Reading/Writing Coordinator, Berkeley College

The project was introduced to students in our developmental courses. Students enrolled in the courses tend to fall into one of several categories: they are facing cultural differences which have created barriers to mastering fundamental skills, they have mastered fundamental skills but did not take the assessment exam seriously, they lack the fundamental skills but are in denial about their need for development, or they are aware of their need for the development of fundamental skills and take the opportunity very seriously (typically adult learners who are many years removed from formal education). All but the latter struggle with motivation and enthusiasm regarding developing fundamental skills in reading, writing and/or math. The most common question among developmental students is, “Why do we have to learn this?” Our answer was to send students collaboratively on a guided information search so they could answer that question for themselves. We focused the information search on one key aspect of the need for improvement in the core skills: the workplace. The intended outcome was increased retention, universally community-based classroom environments, and more motivated and enthusiastic students. We will share our experience with the projects over several iterations of administration and brainstorm/share innovative ideas for future improvements. This workshop falls under “Using Today’s Technology” and “Peer Cooperative Learning Programs.”

Helping Tutors become Mentors through Observations and Self Reflection.
Gary Campbell, Director of Learning Center Programs, Salt Lake Community College

Well trained tutors can guide students to become self-directed learners, thus increasing student success. Observations and self-reflection allows the tutor a safe place to look back on the tutoring session. We will look at the benefits of observations and self-reflections and some of the different models gathered during our research.

Help Support Professional Development

NCLCA has a long-standing tradition of supporting the professional development of learning center administrators. The Brenda Pfahler Professional Development Grant is awarded to assist in research, leadership, and/or curriculum innovation. Each year, NCLCA sets aside $1,000 to fund one or more projects. The Karen Quinn NCLCA Institute Scholarship provides the recipient with a fee waiver to the NCLCA Institute, giving a new professional in the field a chance to connect with seasoned learning center administrators. The Julia Visor Award provides two cash awards of $100 (each) to the two highest rated conference proposals submitted by graduate students. Learn more about how to apply for these scholarships as well as other grants and awards at www.nclca.org.

The National Center for Developmental Education (NCDE) provides instruction, training programs, research, and other services consistent with the purpose of developmental education and the missions of Appalachian State University and the Reich College of Education. These services are provided to a national audience of professionals dedicated to serving underprepared and disadvantaged college students.
The Council of Learning Assistance and Developmental Education Associations (CLADEA), formerly the American Council of Developmental Education Associations (ACDEA), serves as a clearinghouse for shared information and collaboration among professional associations in the field. Our mission is "to foster mutual support among national and international organizations dedicated to postsecondary learning assistance or developmental education." CLADEA member associations—Association for the Tutoring Profession (ATP), College Reading and Learning Association (CRLA), National Association for Developmental Education (NADE), National Center for Developmental Education (NCDE), and National College Learning Center Association (NCLCA)—are pleased to announce the selection of Fellows for 2010, to be inducted at ATP's National Conference on March 29, 2011.

CLADEA 2010 Fellows:

John N. Gardner ~ Jim Valkenburg ~ Janet N. Zadina

The idea of a Fellows program to recognize and honor leaders in the profession was originally conceived by the distinguished researcher and scholar Martha Maxwell. Fellows are selected based on their long-term and significant contributions to our field. Selection as a Fellow represents the highest honor conferred upon professionals in learning assistance, tutoring, and developmental education.

Individuals selected as Fellows must be nominated by a current Fellow or by a member association. Current Fellows then review a portfolio of each nominee's accomplishments and vote to determine who will be selected as new Fellows. Previously inducted Fellows include the following:

- David Arendale
- Carol Bader
- Barbara Bonham
- Nancy Bornstein
- Hunter Boylan
- Kathy Carpenter*
- Martha Casazza
- David Caverly
- Frank Christ
- Susan Clark-Thayer
- K. Patricia Cross
- Nancy Carriuolo
- Al Granowsky
- Phoebe Helm
- Jeanne Higbee
- Russ Hodges
- Gene Kerstiens*
- Lucy MacDonald

The A+dvancer Online Courseware solution is a web-based educational software application specifically designed as a supplemental prescriptive and instructional program aligned to college-readiness proficiencies -

ACCUPLACER® & COMPASS™.

A+dvancer Courseware, through a series of prescriptive assessment tests based on the college-ready proficiencies for ACCUPLACER® & COMPASS™:

- Arithmetic
- Elementary Algebra
- College-Level Math
- College Algebra
- Pre-Calculus
- Trigonometry
- Reading Comprehension
- Sentence Skills

identifies skill-level deficiencies of the test recipient. The application can then automatically prescribe and deliver web-based, direct instructional curriculum designed in the universally accepted study, practice, mastery format.

The assessment and instructional components may also be deployed independently for separate diagnostic or instructional uses.

Schools have found this product to be of great assistance in their tutoring labs, learning centers, and an alternative to traditional developmental education courses.

ACCUPLACER is a registered trademark of College Board and collegeboard.com. Compass is a trademark of ACT.

THURSDAY NIGHT ON THE TOWN

Feel the Thrill on a Speedway Tour!

The Feel The Thrill Tour includes a close-up look at areas that are off-limits on race days. Visit the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series garage, travel down pit road and take a picture in Victory Circle. The highlight of this half-hour tour is a comfortable van ride around the superspeedway where you will feel the full-tilt force of the 24-degree banking. If you’d like to see zMAX Dragway as well, join the 11:30 a.m. or 3:30 p.m. tour Monday through Saturday.

The Speedway Club at Charlotte Motor Speedway

The Speedway Club holds a unique place both in North Carolina’s racing legacy and in the world of private clubs. With a membership roster representing more than 5000 people, the Speedway Club is a distinctive haven of comfort, great food and the excitement of motor racing on multiple levels. There is a constant whirl of activity here. Dine as you watch an active speedway in operation more than 300 days per year.

NoDa Gallery Crawl (North Davidson Street)
6:00pm - 9:00 pm
Every 1st and 3rd Friday of the Month

There is no official beginning or end - it is not an organized parade of viewers. It is like a pub crawl, but instead of visiting only watering holes, participants meander at their leisure through a fine collection of galleries featuring original works in all mediums by artists at all stages of professional development.

Admission is free; parking on the street is free and $3 @ Neighborhood Theater lot.

The center of NoDa is the corner of 36th and Davidson. you will find several restaurants and pubs, a deli, a cute coffee shop, a dog bar (humans welcome), wine bars, live music venues, a few boutiques and shops and several galleries all within a very few of blocks. And there’s a lot more on the other side of the RR tracks towards Tryon St.!!
